The Fox and the Grapes

(La volpe e l'uva)

You know that fables often teach a lesson – called a moral – about behaviour or life. Notice in the following fable that the moral appears at the end of the body of the text.

One morning Mr. Fox is looking for food when he sees some large, purple grapes hanging from a tall grapevine.

“I am hungry” he says to himself, “and those grapes look ripe and delicious. I will eat them all.”

He jumps once but the bunch of grapes is too high. He makes a second try but, still, he misses the grapes.

By now he is famished for some breakfast.

He runs a few steps first and then leaps again but he just cannot reach the fruit. After a few more attempts, Mr. Fox gives up and walks away.

“I don’t want those grapes, anyway” he thinks.

“They are probably sour.”

The moral of the story is: it is easy to despise what you cannot have.
